

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: I just had a great idea!

Learning Outcome

Exchange information about unlikely events or fairly certain conditions that will be fulfilled in present, past or future in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about science, technology and gadgets.
- I can say and pronounce words like tests and tasks.
- I can use proper intonation in lists.

Ask your partner:

- How often do you share your ideas with others?
- How possible is it to make a good idea a reality?

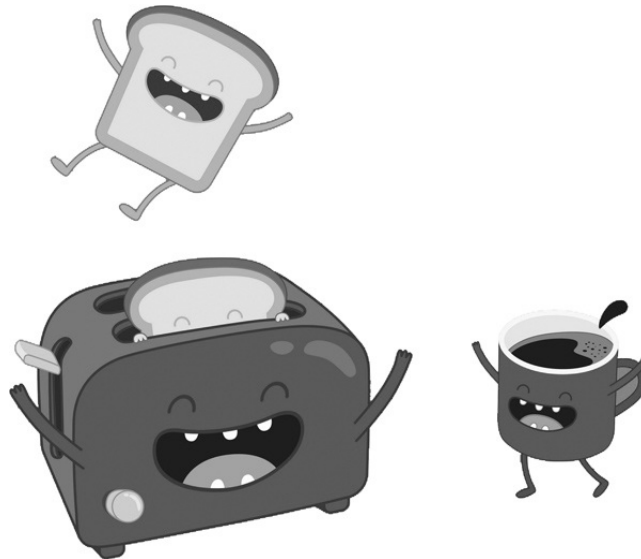

Let's Explore!

Whenever someone asks about one of his tasks, he tsks.

* To "tsk" is when you make sounds with your tongue by pulling it away from the roof of your mouth.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Tom insists on lists. He basks in the glory of sanity. Whenever someone asks about one of his tasks, he tsks. Tom boasts that when it comes to it, there are no risks. He posts his notes on the wall with post-its in varying shades of yellow, blue, pink and green to make his world vibrate with color. Even though you may think that necessity is the mother of invention, sometimes it is not. Accidents often prove to be fruitful when it comes to inventions like the post-it notes that Tom loves so much. How else would he get through his day thinking, organizing and listing and posting? Sticky notes are his friend!

Velcro, that buttonless fastener, was the brainchild of a Swiss engineer. He did tests with materials that were fashioned after the burdock disks that stuck to his socks and his dog's furry coat. He sat at his desk looking, drawing, considering options and trying out variations of the hook and loop fastener. Where would we be without velcro for tiny fists that have a hard time with buttons?

One of my favorite inventions is the simple toaster. It toasts my bread just the way I like it in the morning and if it breaks, a new one costs very little. I vary my routine with bagels, hot cross buns, pop-tarts and all types of bread. I never get tired of toast! Meet at tea time for crumpets! Let's end up with potato chips! Those salty, crispy, crunchy, thin slices of potatoes everyone loves so much! George Crum invented these in anger. Someone complained his potatoes weren't fried enough, so George sliced the next batch super thin and fried them extra long. His customer loved them and begged for more. Ah inventions, don't you just love them!

Let's Practice!

Let's see which words you remember.

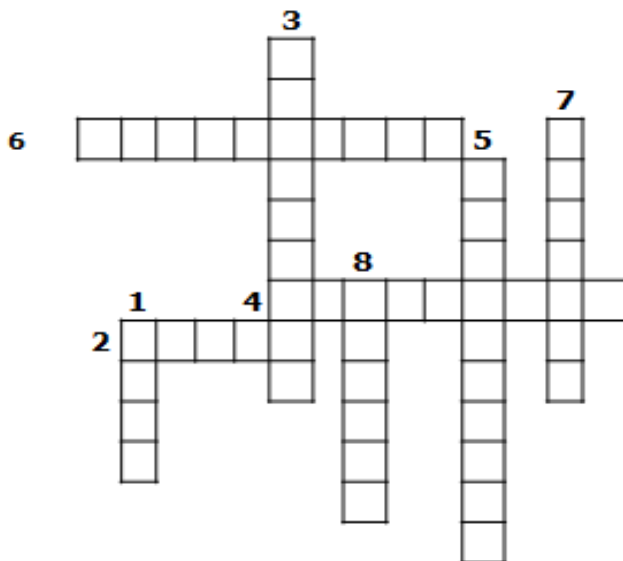

Instructions: Complete the crossword. First, read the clues. Then, write down your answers.

Down

1. to revel in and make the most of something
3. need for something
5. without buttons
7. a hook-bearing flower which clings to animal's fur
8. a fastener, covered in little hooks, which adhere when pressed together and can be separated when pulled apart deliberately

Across

2. to speak proudly
4. something newly designed or created
6. an original idea, plan or invention

Let's Practice!

Let's practice intonation in lists.

Instructions: Underline all the words that are part of a list. Practice saying the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. He posts his notes on the wall with post-its in varying shades of yellow, blue, pink and green to make his world vibrate with color.
2. How else would he get through his day thinking, organizing, listing and posting?
3. He sat at his desk looking, drawing, considering options and trying out variations.
4. I vary my food routine with bagels, hot cross buns, pop-tarts and all types of bread.
5. Those salty, crispy, crunchy, thin slices of potatoes everyone loves so much!

Extension Activity

Practice using proper intonation in list

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Write 15 sentences, each having a list of 3 to 5 items.
- Check the intonation pattern for lists again then practice saying your sentences until they sound natural, with the correct intonation.
- Read your sentences to another student and ask for feedback.
- Exchange sentence lists and try out the new sentences.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I write sentences with lists.

☐ ☐

I practice reading the sentences paying careful attention to the intonation pattern.

☐ ☐

I read my sentences aloud and ask for feedback.

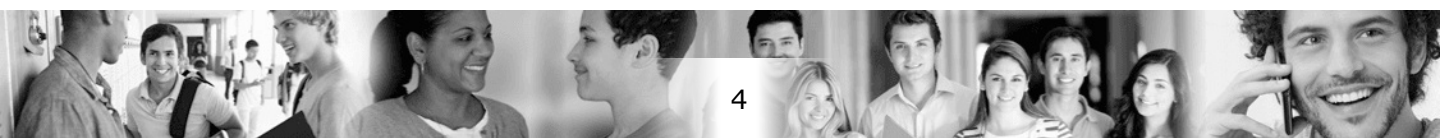

☐ ☐

I try out sentences with lists I have never seen before.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to bask (verb): to revel in and make the most of e.g. He basks in the glory of sanity.
- to boast (verb): to speak proudly
e.g. Tom boasts that when it comes to it, there are no risks.
- necessity (noun): need for something e.g. Even though you may think that necessity is the mother of invention, sometimes it is not.
- invention (noun): something newly designed or created
e.g. Accidents often prove to be fruitful when it comes to inventions like the post-it notes that Tom loves so much.
- buttonless (adjective): without buttons
e.g. Velcro, that buttonless fastener, was the brainchild of a Swiss engineer.
- brainchild (noun): an original idea, plan or invention
e.g. Velcro, that buttonless fastener, was the brainchild of a Swiss engineer.
- burdock (noun): a hook-bearing flower which clings to animal's fur e.g. He did tests with materials that were fashioned after the burdock disks that stuck to his socks and his dog's furry coat.
- velcro (noun): a fastener, covered in little hooks, which adhere when pressed together and can be separated when pulled apart deliberately
e.g. Velcro, that buttonless fastener, was the brainchild of a Swiss engineer.
- batch (noun): a group of things produced at the same time
e.g. Someone complained his potatoes weren't fried enough, so George sliced the next batch super thin and fried them extra long.

Learning Points

Consonant Clusters: sts and sks

Consonant clusters are groups of two consonants or more together. They form a specific sound when they are combined in a particular way. Usually the sounds of some of the consonants may be reduced or dropped.

In -sts consonant clusters, the /t/ sound can be dropped.

Example:

toasts = /toas:s/

insists = /insis:s/

In -sks consonant clusters, the /k/ sound can be dropped.

Example:

basks = /bas:s/

tasks = /tas:s/

Practice reading the following sentences aloud:

Examples:

- Tom insists on lists.
- He basks in the glory of sanity.
- Whenever someone asks about one of his tasks, he tsks.
- Tom boasts that when it comes to it, there are no risks.
- He did tests with materials that were fashioned after the burdock disks that stuck to his socks and his dog's furry coat.

Learning Points

Intonation in Lists

When you talk about lists, it is important to use the right stress and intonation. With lists, you raise the intonation for each word in a list until the last word in the list, which goes down.

When you talk about lists, the intonation goes up for every word in the list, until the last word, where it goes down.

Example:

How else would he get through his day thinking↗, organizing↗, listing ↗and posting↘?

Practice the following sentences from the text:

Examples:

- How else would he get through his day thinking, organizing and listing and posting?
- He posts his notes on the wall with post-its in varying shades of yellow, blue, pink and green to make his world vibrate with color.
- He sat at his desk looking, drawing, considering options and trying out variations of the hook and loop fastener.
- I vary my routine with bagels, hot cross buns, pop-tarts and all types of bread.

